HONGKONG, NOVEMBER 22nd, 1897.

As acrimonious controversy has recently been going on in the columns of the Japan Gazette and the Japan Mail with reference to the position of foreign newspaper enterprise in Japan upon the coming into force of the revised treaties. In the treaties no special reference is made to newspapers, and mentioned, nor can the latter, any more under the existing press law only Japanese than the former, he brought strictly under subjects may publish newspapers. The Japan Mail maintains that newspaper enterprise is not covered by the treaties, but that there is no cause for anxiety, as an alteration of the press law will undoubtedly be made, the existing law being framed to meet existing conditions only. The Japan Gazette on the other hand maintains that there is grave cause for anxiety and claims the construction of the new storm water drain. that the rights of foreign newspaper pro-enacted that only Japaneze subjects should be allowed to publish newspapers, i.e., vermenlar newspapers, in Japan, and as regards foreigners effect was given to that law by regulations issued by their own nuthorities, in the absence of which the law would of course not have been binding upon them. Recently the press law was re-enacted with amendments, the object being to secure greater freedom to the press by removing the power possessed by the Government of Hon, F. H. May, C.M.G., 2 arbitrary suspension, etc., and to provide Mr. P. A. Cox, that all press offences should be tried by the courts of law. But in the new Act the previously existing restriction of the right of: nublication to Japanese subjects was reovacted, and it is this re-enactment that has specially attracted the attention of foreign journalists and brought the subject to the front. The Japan Mail argues that the Interpretation Ordinance. restriction is a necessity so long as the existing conditions continue, that is, until the new treaties come into operation in 1899. That argument may be admitted, for the nacular newspapers by foreigners, who would be free from the legal obligations resting upon native publishers, apply now as and practically no damage was done. formerly. But our contemporary also argues that the re-enactment does not imply any intention on the part of the Government to matter of course be taken to accord foreign journalists national treatment. That also may be correct, but if it to be a question of sufferance and not of right the point is involved in sufficient doubt to justify anxiety on the part of those interested, for in matters of law strict interpretation has to be adopted and Intentions count for nothing. Possibly if the matter were left entirely to the discretion of the Japanese Government, without any representation being made by the British or any other foreign Government, everything might be arranged satisfactorily, but it is equally possible that grave difficulties might ensue. If the Japanese Government does not wish or intend to interfere with the publication of foreign newspapers when the publishers become subject to Japanese law we fail to see what objection it could have to making a binding declaration to that effect at once and accepting a reading of the treaties that would include newspaper enterprise in the terms relating to business in general. The desire of foreign journalists in Japan (or some of them) to able one, and it is difficult to understand why the expression of the desire should excite the ire of the Japan Mail. The Japan Gazette urges that the continuance of foreign newspapers in Japan should not depend upon the sufferance of the Japanese Government, but should be regarded as a matter of right—that a British subject in Japan should have the same right to publish a newspaper there that a Japanese subject has to publish a newspaper in England.

If it be decided that the treaty does not cover newspaper enterprise questions might equally be raised with respect to other of enterprise mentioned. in an article reviewing the position taken up by the Mail and we present it in the Chronicle's own words:-The contention of our contemporary amounts to this that unless a trade, business, or profession is specifically mentioned in the Treatics, foreigners | served may have been agreeable to our visitors, | Jervois Street, but saw nothing more. THE SITUATION IN KOREA. Our advices from Koren indicate that, whatever may be the sentiment in this country, the foreign residents in Soul consider themselves to be in the presence of something very like a crisis. We are always most unwilling to lend our columns for the circulation of any matter calculated to embitter international feeling but too much reticence may prove as mischievous as exaggeration, and we shall therefore reproduce the statements of a correspondent, who writes from Söul, under date of October 26th:—"Ever. since the arrival of the present Russian Representative in Soul, it has deemed to be his policy to ride rough shod over anything that is not distinctly and declaredly Russo-phile. Tho Koreans have been overswed and overpowered by him. The reply of the Korean warded these preposterous proposals to India in Government was that Mr. Brown acted as Adviser under royal edict, and that he could not be thrust aside. It is reported that, on receipt of this unswer, the Russian Representative demanded an audience with the King within twenty-four hours. At all events, he had an audience yesterday (October 25th), at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Of course the public does not know exactly what passed between the Monarch and his visitor. But it is affirmed that the British Consul General to-day received from the Korean Minister of Foreign Affairs a despatch announcing that Mr. Brown's services would no longer be required as Financial Adviser and Chief Commissioner of Customs. That is a direct blow between England's eyes. If sho lallows Mr. Brown to be kicked out in this unceremonious, nay brutal, fashion, adieu to her influence in Korea! The existence of luminous emanations from the living body has been demonstrated by Dr. Luys to the Paris Biological Society in the following manner. In the dark room the fingers were placed on an ordinary photographic plate for about twenty minutes, the plate being in a bath of the usual hydroquinons solution, and the negative was then fixed in the usual way. Not only are singers, with their lines and pores, reproduced, but a kind-of halo a third of sa inch wide surrounds each. No result was obtained when the experiment was tried on patients whose hands were paralyzed or in any way benunabed.

The mantles for the Welsbach gas-burner must contain ceria as well as theria, it being a curious fact, that, while pare thorium oxide has a fceble glow in the Bunson flame, the presence of one per cent or less of cerium oxide increases the light ten or twelve fold. Herr G. P. Drossbach attributes this to "resonance." That is, he supposes that the vibrations of the thoria molecules are not synchronous with those of the Bussen flame, but that the presence of a small amount of ceria puts them in accord as a bit of wax will bring into accord two tuning forks of slightly different pitch.

Electromagnets, which have been employed at Woolwich for hoisting shells and other iron objects, have now been put to work in a plate mill for handling plates. The chief difficulty encountered was the lifting of too many plates, but it was found that this could be overcome 1971 by skillfully breaking the current—causing one or two plates to fall at each break until only one plate was left. Loads of five tons can be safely handled with double-pole magnets taking four amperes at 240 volts.

The walking of a fly on the ceiling is a famihar phenomenon not yet fully understood. A recent paper by Mr. D. H. Dierhold mentions that the microscope quickly disproves the old theory that flies hold to smooth surfaces by means of suckers, and that Hooke's idea that: flies stick to glass by a viscous secretion was shown a dozen years ago to be only partly sound Dr. Rombout has established the fact that the flies hang on by the help of capillary adhesionthe molecular attraction between solid and liquid bodies. It is true the foot hairs are very minute, but, as each fly is said to have 10,000 or 12,000, we need not be surprised at what they can do.
